

13 March 2018

Type 2 Diabetes Management

for GPs and Practice Nurses

Type 2 diabetes is projected to be the leading specific cause of disease burden by 2023. A multidisciplinary team approach to diabetes management results in less complications and the best health outcomes for patients. General Practice has a central role in managing this.

Speakers

Dr Shilpa Verma, Endocrinologist from Eastern Health and the IDEAS (Integrated Diabetes Education and Assessment Service) Program

Fiona Wallace, IDEAS Manager and Service Development, Carrington Health

Learning Outcomes

- Review current clinical guidelines in managing Type 2 Diabetes
- Describe pharmacological options (including new drugs) and their place in treatment plans
- Optimise multi-disciplinary management with appropriate referrals and localised referral pathways, including the IDEAS program
