My Health Record in practice – what's next

For pharmacists

Eastern Melbourne Primary Health Network (EMPHN) invites pharmacists to a practical session highlighting how pharmacists may use the My Health Record system in routine practice, and benefits for them and their patients.

Facilitated by

Vandana Chandnani – Pharmacist and Education Lead -
Australian Digital Health Agency

Andrew Robinson – Pharmacy Owner and Digital Health
Leader

Nine out of 10 Australians have a My Health Record. The national My Health Record system is an electronic summary of an individual's health information, which can be securely accessed by patients and healthcare providers involved in their care.

Based on real-life case studies, these events will highlight clinical situations in which My Health Record may be used in practice and hands-on training for pharmacists.

Learning Outcomes

- Improved understanding of My Health Record benefits, features and functionality
- Describe the processes involved in implementing and adopting My Health Record as part of your clinical workflow
- Describe the privacy and security obligations of the pharmacy profession in relation to My Health Record, and how this can be communicated to patients.
- Describe how to use My Health Record to benefit patient care via use of the access, view and upload function of a patient's clinical documents
- Describe where to access further information and support resources about My Health Record
